Courting Art program to dedicate art exhibit at courthouse

Norristown, PA (July 16, 2013) – Montgomery County commissioners are expected to be among the county officials, Common Pleas Court judges, artists and others on Monday, July 22 at 3:30 p.m. on the plaza level of the county courthouse as the inaugural collection of award-winning art from the recent “Courting Art” contest is dedicated and officially displayed in the courthouse.

Sponsored by the Montgomery Bar Association, the “Courting Art” contest was open to county residents 55 years of age and older and drew well over 100 pieces of art that were originally exhibited at the Montgomery County Community College Fine Arts Center with the winners announced on May 13.

The public is invited to view the art exhibit at the dedication or thereafter during regular courthouse hours.

Judge Carolyn Tornetta Carluccio, chair of the bar association’s outreach committee and the guiding force behind the “Courting Art” program, said details and exciting new developments for next year’s contest will be announced at the dedication.
